Mones says...

What would you do if a fellow Christian called you to the front of the plane for the midday prayer? Would you respond readily, or would you just let it go and pretend you didn't hear him calling, or see him nodding?

This is one of the most interesting flying experiences I have when flying out to or back from Israel. Like clockwork, it happened again on the flight I was on to Israel this week. A religious man in his mid-thirties and his wife sat next to me on the flight, it was obvious he practiced his religion by the Kippah on his head.

At 2.30pm he was approached by an ultra-religious man and asked if he could join them at the front for prayer. You see, they needed to reach the Menian, the count, to be able to fulfill the requirement for public prayer which can only be done if the required number of male participants is reached.

A clamour took place around the flight and the men were found. Other passengers of the same faith sniggered and laughed, women moved and got out of the vicinity, but the men just carried on. I have to say I am impressed by their dedication and their desire to fulfil a requirement of prayer, to make themselves aware of God's presence and nearness.

Yet for us, believers in Jesus, we handle His nearness to us so lightly, and allow ourselves to live our days in a sense of secularised pattern instead of turning our eyes and mind and ears towards heaven seeking the one who brought the fullness of heaven and the presence of our loving God to us.

"You didn't want heaven without us, so you brought heaven down". Make it your business, your pattern and your heart's desire to turn your eyes to Him and to open your heart for Him. Do it in the morning, at noonday, in the evening, and last thing at night; and in every moment throughout the day.

Your Saviour and Friend is so near to you, make yourself aware of His presence and see your days and your life transform.
